 Professor at Howard University

2021 marks the 100th year in which the first Black CPA John W. Cromwell was licensed. Despite significant focus and financial investment over the past 50 years the number of Black CPAs is still less than 1%.

The National Society of Black Certified Public Accountants, Inc. a nonprofit (501 c3) organization of licensed CPAs has developed a CPA exam review program - CPA Breakthrough to increase these disappointing numbers.

THIS UNIQUE VIRTUAL ONE-YEAR EXAM REVIEW PROGRAM
CPA BREAKTHROUGH PROVIDES:

- Consistency, Commitment, and Celebration
- Prepared Basic Accounting Videos
- Accountability Study Sessions
- Buddy/mentor assigned to help make sure you stay on track toward your CPA goal
- Relationships with other active Black CPAs who are leaders in the profession and NSBCPA partners
- Exam fees paid by the program for the initial exam and one retake if you're following the program requirements and guidance
- Assessments of your progress on a weekly basis by the NSBCPA team to make sure you don't fall behind on your exam preparation
- Killer test taking strategies prepared by Black CPAs for future Black CPAs
- Technical skills development
- Higher earning potential because CPAs make more money on average than accountants who aren't CPAs
- Realness...we're going to push you hard and let you know if you're not doing what you need to do to pass the exam
- One cohort getting our full dedication so that we can focus on getting this group past the CPA exam
- Understanding of which state is best to pursue your license based on transcript analysis and state licensing requirements
- Guidance from Black PhD and/or CPA professors via a weekly virtual classroom
- Heritage...promoting generational wealth
